

Artist Statement

My Body of work explores pre-colonial culture as well as decolonizing practices in contemporary culture, the essence of black identity and questions of empowerment in society. My patterns which I call Anansinism, takes advantage of the intricate design of spider webs, their complexity, and their embolizing effect. Through fusing visual design networks in a syncopated manner, and infusing Adinkra symbology from Ghanaian history, I create both original and traditional designs that are painted onto the body. My works are fueled by the African traditional mask and its creators as well as re-echoing the collective knowledge and wisdom of my ancestors, which is gradually losing its vigor among contemporary audiences.
